Commuting Alternatives

Telework

Through the use of information technology, many employees are now able to replace work-related travel with teleworking – working at home or closer to home at fully equipped telework or co-working centers. Employers and employees have found teleworking one or more days a week improves the quality of life, increases productivity, as well as reduces absenteeism, sick leave and late arrivals due to traffic. Visit our website to find out how to make teleworking work for you.

Flextime and Compressed Work Schedules

Flextime programs give employees the option of adjusting their arrival and departure times which helps to avoid peak travel times and thus, the worse traffic of the day. Another effective way to help cut commuting time is a compressed work schedule

(such as a four-day, 40-hour week), which can eliminate one day of commuting per week. Visit our website to find out how we can help set up a flexible or compressed work schedule program.
